Teaching Materials: The Textbooks and Casebooks Available

Professor Anghie will lead an exercise comparing chapters on the Law of Treaties from a variety of leading international law textbooks and casebooks. The objective of the exercise is to get acquainted with the different options available in the field, discuss the strengths and weaknesses of each material, and make informed decisions on which materials to include in a course outline.

Open-Ended Discussion

An open-ended discussion will follow, in which participants can ask questions or give comments on any of the key issues that arose during the previous two sessions. These include, among others, the following:

- Available textbooks and casebooks
- Use of local or indigenous materials and/or historical treaties
- Critical and interdisciplinary approaches
- Problem-oriented teaching methodology
- Incorporating treaties into the domestic context
